Man Brings Raccoon Carcass Into McDonald's, Causes Its Brief Closed

A San Francisco man shocked employees and customers at a local McDonald's Sunday morning when he brought a dead and bloodied raccoon into the fast-food outlet and laid it on a table. As a result, the restaurant closed for two hours so the dining room could be sanitized. The unappetizing encounter was captured by Chris Brooks, who posted video on Facebook. (WARNING: Brooks reflected on the incident with a profanity-laden tirade.) Brooks told SFGate.com that the so-far unidentified man came into the McDonald's screaming for help as he carried the dead animal. "He came to the counter, and I thought it was a dog at first. The employees told him to leave and he went and sat down with it," Brooks said. "There was blood on the table and blood on the floor and, with people walking around, you could see them tracking the blood around." The man, who is believed to be homeless, was kicked out of the store while another customer threw the raccoon in the garbage, according to NBC Bay Area. San Francisco police officers gave the man a mental health evaluation and determined he did not need to be detained, according to local station KGO TV. San Francisco Department of Public Health spokeswoman Rachel Kagan told SFGate.com that a physician who works with homeless people watched the video but "cannot infer anything about the man's condition." Kagan also said the restaurant responded properly and that a health inspector visited the site before it reopened. "The health concerns would be about the blood and the potential to spread bacteria or a virus," she said. "If the cleaning was done right, that would take care of that concern."

Trump Says He's Likely To Declare National Emergency If Congress Won't Fund Wall

President Trump says he is willing to declare a national emergency if Democrats don't go along with his demands for $5.7 billion for a border wall. Trump's campaign for a border wall took him to McAllen, Texas, on Thursday for a visit to a Border Patrol station and a roundtable discussion with local officials, before heading to the Rio Grande. As he left the White House on Thursday morning, Trump said he has the "absolute right" to declare a national emergency in order to construct a border wall but said he prefers to continue efforts to make a deal with Congress. However, he said, "If we don't make a deal, I think it would be very surprising to me" to not declare an emergency. House Speaker Nancy Pelosi, D-Calif., sidestepped a question about the issue Thursday, telling reporters, "If and when the president does that, you'll find out how we will react." Some 800,000 federal workers have been furloughed or are working without paychecks because of the standoff. Many will be missing their first paychecks on Friday.
